Imparting Generational Blessing

A vision and word of wisdom from the Lord:

I saw the trunk of a mighty oak tree. Alongside it was a tiny sapling, growing at its root.

“The generational cooperation required to see the promise birthed is not unique but speaks of a path of blessing, blood-bought and long fought.

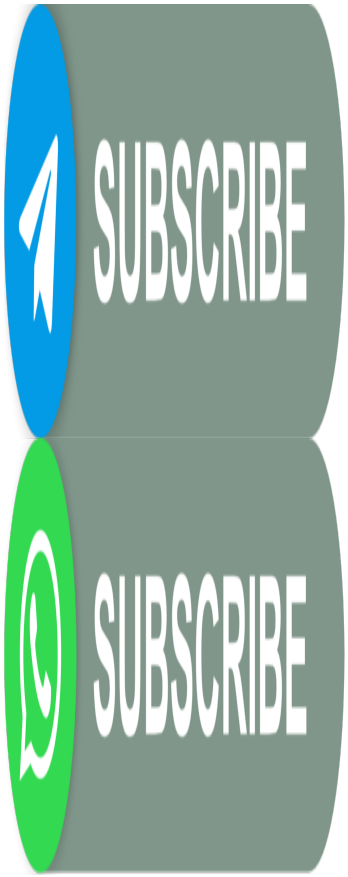

The impartation of blessing from one generation to the next requires connection and transparency, a unity and oneness that reveals the Trinity.

Our enemy despises this generational connection. He is hell bent on undermining it at every turn. And so the world’s system is driven by a segregational mentality, each generation being held in its specific institution.

But the Kingdom of Heaven is a glorious combination of every generation: the young ones brightening the hearts of the older ones and the youths fighting alongside their elders.

All of life’s circle revolves around Me, the preserver of life and truth, the maker of heaven and earth, the universe of the mature and the youth.”
